AMERICAN MARKETS OUTLOOK: U.S. markets are set to open higher, although several factors are likely to contribute to a choppy session, says City Index Chief Strategist Tom Hougaard. Hougaard notes that Friday is the rollover from the December to March contracts, adding that "market watchers often use this as a pivot point between a bullish and bearish argument." The result, he says, is likely to be range-trading for much of the day. The November Michigan sentiment survey will be the main macroeconomic event of the day, while three sessions of lower prices in the U.S. is putting pressure on bulls to support the key technical level of 1,250 in the S&P500, he adds.

City Index is calling the DJIA up 15 points to 10,770 and the Nasdaq up five points to 2,251.

EUROPEAN MARKETS: European stocks are weaker. The FTSE 100 is down 0.4% at 5,509, with U.K. October global goods trade data providing little support. In Frankfurt, the DAX is down 0.3% at 5,270 on continued weak signals from the U.S. and higher oil prices, traders say. "Both, buyers and sellers are acting cautiously Friday," says the trader, adding that this indicates a sideways movement below the new year's highs intraday. The University of Michigan survey, at 1445 GMT, will be in focus in the afternoon session, with the DAX expected to range between 5,250 and 5,310 during the day. The Paris CAC-40 is down 0.4% at 4,651.

European government bonds are rangebound after starting the session under pressure following comments by various European Central Bank officials indicating that more rate increases may be on the horizon, says a dealer. Otherwise, the focus is on the release of the preliminary Michigan consumer sentiment index for December, due at 1445 GMT. March bunds are up 0.04 at 121.23, and March gilts are 0.14 higher at 113.36.

Expectations that U.S. consumer confidence data later in the day will prove strong and that the U.S. Federal Reserve will remain hawkish after its meeting next week are helping to push the dollar higher at midday. At the same time, efforts by the European Central Bank to scale back recent suggestions that it might be prepared to raise interest rates again soon, and news from Japan that it has revised down its third-quarter growth estimates, have undermined both the euro and the yen. The euro is weaker at $1.1790, while the dollar has risen to ¥120.39 against the yen. The pound, meanwhile, has slipped to $1.7492.

1059 GMT [Dow Jones] US stocks to open flat or slightly lower, in "the calm before the storm" that the economic data may kick up, says Angus Campbell at Finspreads. Calls the DJIA flat at 10912.6, the S&P500 down half a point to 1264. Says equities should be supported if the non-farm payroll data at 1330 GMT are good, but warns too strong a number may cause markets may fall on increased inflation concerns. (PBA)

MARKET TALK can be found using N/DJMT

1:38 (Dow Jones) S&P and Nasdaq futures are lower, but trading in tight trading ranges ahead of the FOMC's announcement on interest rates. Rise in ISM manufacturing prices index heightens inflation fears, bolstering thoughts of continued rate hikes. A couple of trading sources report Goldman Sachs as a strong seller early of Dec S&P's after being a heavy buyer the previous day. Technically, Dec S&P's create double-bottom support by touching yesterday's pit-session low of 1203.00. Next support at yesterday's Globex low of 1199.70. Resistance is at 1209.80, which is yesterday's settlement and the 200-day moving average. Dec DJIA stays higher, but inside Monday's range. (HLP)

1:28 (Dow Jones) Ford (F) sales analysis manager George Pipas said the company's new Fusion sedan - introduced in October - is the right product at the right time and could knock off the company's Mustang as the industry's "hottest product." He says buyers are flocking to the new car, partially due to its promise of fuel efficiency. The company initially planned to sell 2,700, but shattered its expectation by delivering 4,100. Ford needs all the help it can get, with sales of its profitable Explorer SUV, redesigned for the new model year, tanking nearly 60% in the month. (JDS)

1:21 (Dow Jones) REITs are the biggest decliners among the 100 industry groups tracked by Dow Jones, with Mills' (MLS) 3Q warning echoing through the sector. MLS is off 14% to $45.87; American Financial Realty (AFR) down 4.7% to $11.73; and Taubman Centers (TCO) off 4.1% to $31.61. (AAC)

1:13 (Dow Jones) Placer Dome (PDG) management may strongly oppose Barrick's (ABX) takeover bid but can't very well argue that it should be left alone, "as many institutional shareholders are disgruntled with Placer's recent performance," Desjardins Securities says. White-knight candidates include Newmont (NEM), Gold Fields (GFI) and AngloAshanti (AU), and possibly Norilsk Nickel's Polyus gold unit or base-metal producer Teck Cominco (TEK.SV.B.T), the firm says. Teck Cominco has some gold production and "may see this as an opportunity to increase gold and copper exposure." (LMO)

1:07 (Dow Jones) With two-thirds of the companies in the S&P 500 having reported 3Q earnings, Goldman Sachs says a trend is clear. "Firms that sell to other companies reported strong results and provided solid guidance, while firms focused on the consumer cited difficulty passing on high input costs and margins suffered." Diversified industrial stocks illustrate the trend. Companies like GE and Illinois Tool Works (ITW) saw strong trends in their industrial end markets, where companies like American Standard (ASD) posted disappointing results as it couldn't pass on costs to the consumer segment. (PJV)

1:01 (Dow Jones) Tenet Healthcare (THC) will "ultimately" close two of its rehabilitation facilities because they'll probably never be able to meet a new Medicare reimbursement requirement, THC's CEO says. The new rule would require 75% of a rehab unit's patients to have certain medical conditions in order to qualify for Medicare rehab payments. CEO Trevor Fetter says two of its 22 rehab units "are likely never to be able to meet the rule," and so would be closed, but he didn't specify which ones. Shares off 2.6% to $8.20. (PDL)

12:51 (Dow Jones) Bear Stearns upbeat on Marsh & McLennan's (MMC) 3Q numbers. "The company appears to continue to be making strong progress toward returning to form, as core insurance broking revenue was better than we expected," the firm says. Consulting business also performing well, according to Bear, and management seems to be making progress in securing higher commission rates. But Banc of America notes some of the areas where MMC missed in the 3Q, including a 6.5% drop in risk and insurance services revenues, which was worse than expected. Shares off 2.4% to $28.45. (DMR)

12:48 (Dow Jones) Small stocks' dominance may be coming to an end. October performance figures show the small-cap Russell 2000 trailed large-cap Russell 1000 for the third consecutive month. Russell 2000 dipped 3.1% in October, while the Russell 1000 lost 1.75%. The large-cap index now leads the small-cap index year-to-date. "Small caps have outperformed for six consecutive years," said Dennis Jensen of Russell. "Large caps may be in a position to end that streak in 2005." Meanwhile, the Russell Midcap Index leads all other segments year-to-date, reflecting a gain of 6.76%. (KJT)

12:39 (Dow Jones) Research Capital mining analyst Barry Allan is lukewarm on Barrick's (ABX) bid for Placer Dome (PDG). "We had liked ABX for its low-cost mines and organic growth in production but are less impressed by the new asset mix," he writes. Allan keeps his ABX recommendation at buy due to stock's decline. Blackmont Capital analyst Chad Williams says takeover bid looks OK financially, but ABX will take on many more mines. As a non-U.S. stock, it still won't be eligible for S&P500 inclusion, so big valuation jump as world's biggest gold miner seems unlikely, Williams writes. (LMO)

12:35 (Dow Jones) Weakness in Dell's consumer business "marks a major victory" for Best Buy (BBY) and Circuit City (CC), says CSFB analyst Gary Balter. DELL's announcement is "vindication for the monies that Best Buy has put into customer centricity" and to BBY and CC "thinking outside the box," Balter says. Citigroup's also upbeat about BBY in the wake of DELL's news, and says DELL's report "is more a reflection of loss of market share in the high-end of the PC market than a slowdown in overall consumer demand." Citi says "we would be aggressive buyers" of BBY on weakness. BBY and CC each off a fraction. (DJH/JHS)

12:24 (Dow Jones) Fair value for Computer Sciences (CSC) is around $56, Deutsche Bank says. Until today, the firm's feeling was that CSC was undervalued, but with trading above its $56 price target, "we would be inclined to use the opportunity to take some profits." On a free cash flow basis, the stock is fairly valued, Deutsche says. If an acquirer can lower the DSO, or days sales outstanding, it could boost the company's free cash flow, which would correspondingly increase value. "Every DSO is worth about $40M in cash flow." CSC up 14% at $58.29. (PJV)

1:13 (Dow Jones) Placer Dome (PDG) management may strongly oppose Barrick's (ABX) takeover bid but can't very well argue that it should be left alone, "as many institutional shareholders are disgruntled with Placer's recent performance," Desjardins Securities says. White-knight candidates include Newmont (NEM), Gold Fields (GFI) and AngloAshanti (AU), and possibly Norilsk Nickel's Polyus gold unit or base-metal producer Teck Cominco (TEK.SV.B.T), the firm says. Teck Cominco has some gold production and "may see this as an opportunity to increase gold and copper exposure." (LMO)

1:07 (Dow Jones) With two-thirds of the companies in the S&P 500 having reported 3Q earnings, Goldman Sachs says a trend is clear. "Firms that sell to other companies reported strong results and provided solid guidance, while firms focused on the consumer cited difficulty passing on high input costs and margins suffered." Diversified industrial stocks illustrate the trend. Companies like GE and Illinois Tool Works (ITW) saw strong trends in their industrial end markets, where companies like American Standard (ASD) posted disappointing results as it couldn't pass on costs to the consumer segment. (PJV)

1:01 (Dow Jones) Tenet Healthcare (THC) will "ultimately" close two of its rehabilitation facilities because they'll probably never be able to meet a new Medicare reimbursement requirement, THC's CEO says. The new rule would require 75% of a rehab unit's patients to have certain medical conditions in order to qualify for Medicare rehab payments. CEO Trevor Fetter says two of its 22 rehab units "are likely never to be able to meet the rule," and so would be closed, but he didn't specify which ones. Shares off 2.6% to $8.20. (PDL)

12:51 (Dow Jones) Bear Stearns upbeat on Marsh & McLennan's (MMC) 3Q numbers. "The company appears to continue to be making strong progress toward returning to form, as core insurance broking revenue was better than we expected," the firm says. Consulting business also performing well, according to Bear, and management seems to be making progress in securing higher commission rates. But Banc of America notes some of the areas where MMC missed in the 3Q, including a 6.5% drop in risk and insurance services revenues, which was worse than expected. Shares off 2.4% to $28.45. (DMR)

12:48 (Dow Jones) Small stocks' dominance may be coming to an end. October performance figures show the small-cap Russell 2000 trailed large-cap Russell 1000 for the third consecutive month. Russell 2000 dipped 3.1% in October, while the Russell 1000 lost 1.75%. The large-cap index now leads the small-cap index year-to-date. "Small caps have outperformed for six consecutive years," said Dennis Jensen of Russell. "Large caps may be in a position to end that streak in 2005." Meanwhile, the Russell Midcap Index leads all other segments year-to-date, reflecting a gain of 6.76%. (KJT)

12:39 (Dow Jones) Research Capital mining analyst Barry Allan is lukewarm on Barrick's (ABX) bid for Placer Dome (PDG). "We had liked ABX for its low-cost mines and organic growth in production but are less impressed by the new asset mix," he writes. Allan keeps his ABX recommendation at buy due to stock's decline. Blackmont Capital analyst Chad Williams says takeover bid looks OK financially, but ABX will take on many more mines. As a non-U.S. stock, it still won't be eligible for S&P500 inclusion, so big valuation jump as world's biggest gold miner seems unlikely, Williams writes. (LMO)

12:35 (Dow Jones) Weakness in Dell's consumer business "marks a major victory" for Best Buy (BBY) and Circuit City (CC), says CSFB analyst Gary Balter. DELL's announcement is "vindication for the monies that Best Buy has put into customer centricity" and to BBY and CC "thinking outside the box," Balter says. Citigroup's also upbeat about BBY in the wake of DELL's news, and says DELL's report "is more a reflection of loss of market share in the high-end of the PC market than a slowdown in overall consumer demand." Citi says "we would be aggressive buyers" of BBY on weakness. BBY and CC each off a fraction. (DJH/JHS)

12:24 (Dow Jones) Fair value for Computer Sciences (CSC) is around $56, Deutsche Bank says. Until today, the firm's feeling was that CSC was undervalued, but with trading above its $56 price target, "we would be inclined to use the opportunity to take some profits." On a free cash flow basis, the stock is fairly valued, Deutsche says. If an acquirer can lower the DSO, or days sales outstanding, it could boost the company's free cash flow, which would correspondingly increase value. "Every DSO is worth about $40M in cash flow." CSC up 14% at $58.29. (PJV)

12:05 (Dow Jones) Morgan Stanley raises its price target for South Korea's Kookmin Bank (KB) due to better-than-expected 3Q results. The firm increases KB's target to KRW71,500, a 25% upside. MS keeps rating at overweight, with KB the firm's top pick in the Korean banking industry. In NY, shares up 4.1% to $60.84. (CSS)

11:57 (Dow Jones) Many analysts may say Dell's (DELL) 3Q warning is specific to DELL, but at least one thinks it has negative implications for competitor H-P (HPQ). American Technology's Shaw Wu downgrades HPQ to hold from buy, saying HPQ could be hurt by a shift in consumer spending to entertainment devices, strength in notebook PCs (which only makes up 12% of H-P's revenue) and weakness in desktops. What's more, Wu says he's getting more concerned with aggressive pricing in the printer market and consumers' preference for low-end printers. HPQ up 0.9% to $28.30. (DLF)

12:48 (Dow Jones) Small stocks' dominance may be coming to an end. October performance figures show the small-cap Russell 2000 trailed large-cap Russell 1000 for the third consecutive month. Russell 2000 dipped 3.1% in October, while the Russell 1000 lost 1.75%. The large-cap index now leads the small-cap index year-to-date. "Small caps have outperformed for six consecutive years," said Dennis Jensen of Russell. "Large caps may be in a position to end that streak in 2005." 12:39 (Dow Jones) Research Capital mining analyst Barry Allan is lukewarm on Barrick's (ABX) bid for Placer Dome (PDG). "We had liked ABX for its low-cost mines and organic growth in production but are less impressed by the new asset mix," he writes. Allan keeps his ABX recommendation at buy due to stock's decline. Blackmont Capital analyst Chad Williams says takeover bid looks OK financially, but ABX will take on many more mines. 12:35 (Dow Jones) Weakness in Dell's consumer business "marks a major victory" for Best Buy (BBY) and Circuit City (CC), says CSFB analyst Gary Balter. DELL's announcement is "vindication for the monies that Best Buy has put into customer centricity" and to BBY and CC "thinking outside the box," Balter says. Citigroup's also upbeat about BBY in the wake of DELL's news, and says DELL's report "is more a reflection of loss of market share in the high-end of the PC market than a slowdown in overall consumer demand." Citi says "we would be aggressive buyers" of BBY on weakness. BBY and CC each off a fraction. (DJH/JHS)

12:24 (Dow Jones) Fair value for Computer Sciences (CSC) is around $56, Deutsche Bank says. Until today, the firm's feeling was that CSC was undervalued, but with trading above its $56 price target, "we would be inclined to use the opportunity to take some profits." On a free cash flow basis, the stock is fairly valued, Deutsche says. If an acquirer can lower the DSO, or days sales outstanding, it could boost the company's free cash flow, which would correspondingly increase value. "Every DSO is worth about $40M in cash flow." CSC up 14% at $58.29. (PJV)

12:05 (Dow Jones) Morgan Stanley raises its price target for South Korea's Kookmin Bank (KB) due to better-than-expected 3Q results. The firm increases KB's target to KRW71,500, a 25% upside. MS keeps rating at overweight, with KB the firm's top pick in the Korean banking industry. In NY, shares up 4.1% to $60.84. (CSS)

11:57 (Dow Jones) Many analysts may say Dell's (DELL) 3Q warning is specific to DELL, but at least one thinks it has negative implications for competitor H-P (HPQ). American Technology's Shaw Wu downgrades HPQ to hold from buy, saying HPQ could be hurt by a shift in consumer spending to entertainment devices, strength in notebook PCs (which only makes up 12% of H-P's revenue) and weakness in desktops. What's more, Wu says he's getting more concerned with aggressive pricing in the printer market and consumers' preference for low-end printers. HPQ up 0.9% to $28.30. (DLF)

11:43 (Dow Jones) The focus with American Axle (AXL) should be on risk, not earnings power, Lehman says. AXL is heavily dependent upon GM and SUV sales. "We see big picture risks to both." The firm expects a "decent" recovery in 2006, although one that still falls short of Street views. Lehman tags 2006 EPS at $1.85, down from $2.45. Long term, it sees potential in AXL's growing non-GM, non-SUV backlog, acquisition opportunities and possible renegotiating its UAW contract. AXL off 1.8% to $21.40. (PJV)

11:38 (Dow Jones) Strong momentum in the global art auction market going into the key month of November bodes well for Sotheby's (BID) 4Q, Wedbush Morgan analyst Rommel Dionisio says. October was an "outstanding month," driven by "robust auction activities," he says. Several key collections are scheduled for auction starting this week, and November marks the busiest month for auction activities, Dionisio says. He reiterates his buy rating on BID and 52-week price target of $22. (DJH)

11:28 (Dow Jones) Despite high fuel costs, the US airline industry is gaining momentum for a turnaround. Continental (CAL) expects to report after the bell that passenger revenue rose modestly in October, in a range of 3.5%-4.5% over last year, says JPMorgan's Jamie Baker. But, that's on a capacity increase of 8.4%. With other major airlines reducing domestic capacity, Baker still sees October industry RASM - revenue per seat-mile - growing an impressive 12.5%. Lehman sees CAL and the industry performing even better, with a forecast for CAL October RASM up 6%-8%, and domestic industry up 13%-15%. CAL up 1.2% to $13.11. (ABK)

11:17 (Dow Jones) Charter Communications (CHTR) posted slightly higher-than-expected 3Q revenue and EBITDA, CSFB says in a note. Basic subscriber loss, at 36,800, was also better than expected. The company added 98,000 Internet subscribers during the quarter and 76,000 digital cable users. CSFB had expected 86,000 new Internet users and 32,000 digital cable subscribers. Capital expenditure at $273M was higher than CSFB's estimate of $244M, possibly due to the higher number of digital cable subscribers. Conference call started at 11:00am. CHTR up 3.1% to $1.24. TORONTO (Dow Jones)--High Income Principal and Yield Securities Corp. (PAY.T), or HI PAYS, will suspend distributions to equity and subordinate shareholders following the October distribution.

In a news release, HI PAYS said the decision reflects the decline in the value of the managed portfolio since inception and the current low level of volatility that exists within the option writing markets.

It said fees payable to the manager will be reduced to reflect the suspension of distributions, to 0.50% of net asset value a year from 1.25%. Its board will continue to review the distribution policy on a regular basis.

HI PAYS said it will pay a distribution of 14.17 Canadian cents an equity share on Oct. 31 to unitholders of record Oct. 17.

It also said its board has approved a buyback program, subject to TSX approval, to purchase up to 283,983 preferred shares and 283,983 equity shares, representing 10% of the public float of the outstanding preferred shares and equity shares.

HI PAYS is a diversified portfolio invested primarily in securities listed on the S&P/TSX Composite Index and the S&P500 Index.

NEW YORK (Dow Jones)--Standard & Poor's, the ratings agency owned by McGraw-Hill Cos. (MHP), said it will add Lennar Corp. (LEN) to the S&P 500 index after the market closes on Monday, replacing Gillette Corp., which is being acquired by Proctor & Gamble Co. (PG).

Earlier Friday, U.S. regulators cleared P&G's proposed $57 billion acquisition of Gillette, provided that it sell the Right Guard and Rembrandt brands. The purchase is expected to close Saturday.

Chevron Corp. (CVX) will replace Gillette in the S&P 100, while Beazer Homes USA Inc. (BZH) will replace Lennar in the S&P MidCap 400. In August, Chevron acquired Unocal Corp. in a $18.3 billion deal that ended after a four-month bid war between Chevron and China's state-owned Cnooc Ltd. (CEO).

Sep 27, 2005 (DJCS via Comtex) --

0451 GMT [Dow Jones] Tokyo stocks clearly overheated based on technical chart analyses, although overwhelmingly high buy orders making them meaningless, says Soichiro Monji, chief strategist at Daiwa SB Investments. Market analysis tools such as ratio of Topix and S&P500, Topix's gap between short-term moving averages, Merrill Lynch fund-manager sentiment surveys all show Tokyo stocks overbought, he says. Gap between cash Topix and 52-week moving average still suggests more room to gain, possibly to 1400. Topix down 0.2% at 1383.99. (NXN)

FATHOM FINANCIAL: US Equity Analysts' Optimism Rises

Dow Jones Capital Markets Report

LONDON (Dow Jones)--Over the past few months U.S. economic data have again confounded the U.S. economy bears.

Many saw weaker data earlier this year as a prelude to a more pernicious downturn, but they turned out to be yet another "soft patch." Rather than buckling under the weight of ever higher oil prices, U.S. consumers seem increasingly to be taking higher energy costs in their stride.

Buoyed by continued improvement in the labor market, consumption growth has held in at around 4%, which has kept the U.S. economy as a whole growing at an annualized rate of 3.5% to 4.0%.

More recent data suggest the economy is actually accelerating once again. Timely indicators like the ISM survey of manufacturing activity and consumer confidence measures point to a resurgence in activity.

Meanwhile, inflationary pressures, though a little stronger than they were a year ago, remain under control as the Federal Reserve continues its gradual removal of policy stimulus.

Of course the bloated U.S. current account deficit remains an issue, but with global growth improving and with the dollar somewhat weaker, the deficit should begin to stabilize and eventually begin to shrink.

Fathom's forecast, which is presented in the form of a probability distribution, envisages that this pattern of robust growth with moderate inflation will continue.

Our central scenario is for growth to average 3.5% both this year and next, with CPI inflation falling back from 3% in 2005 to 2.4% in 2006. The Federal Reserve is expected to raise rates to 4.25% by mid-2006.

The risks around that central projection are slightly skewed to the downside, mainly thanks to the uncertainty created by the current account position and in particular China's role in financing it.

However, on balance the outlook is for a fairly benign mix of growth and inflation.

To regular readers of this column, this forecast will come as no surprise - this has long been our view. But what is new is that, finally, the financial markets seem to share this relatively optimistic outlook.

Having tried and failed repeatedly to second-guess the Fed's view, the bond market may at last be accepting the inevitable conclusion that the recovery is for real and will endure. Ten-year Treasury yields have broken out of the 3.75% to 4.25% range they have been stuck in for the past few years. They currently stand at around 4.4% and should continue to climb toward 5% as the Fed tightens policy.

But let's take a close look at the current recommendations of U.S. equity analysts to show how this generally positive growth backdrop is also being reflected in the equity market. Analyst recommendations: what do they favor?

Many U.S. corporates have delivered higher-than-expected earnings so far this year. It now seems that the earnings cycle that arguably began in mid-2002 will continue into at least the early part of 2006.

Initially the recovery in earnings was driven by a sharp cutback in discretionary spending, but over the past two years this corporate financial discipline has been supported by a weaker dollar and a generally buoyant domestic and global economic backdrop.

By looking at analyst recommendations for individual stocks and then by aggregating these up, we can construct a bottom-up view of the corporate outlook according to equity analysts.

Analysts group their recommendations according to fairly unambiguous sounding categories: "sell," "underperform," "hold," "buy" and "strong buy."

We have collated these recommendations for every stock in the S&P500. Then for each company we have calculated the proportion of each recommendation type as a proportion of total recommendations for each company.

For the whole of the S&P500, there is a strong bias amongst analysts toward hold, buy and strong buy recommendations.

On average, nearly half of the calls made on S&P500 stocks are "hold" recommendations, while around 20% are "strong buy."

Meanwhile, the equivalent figures for "underperform" and "sell" are 2.0% and 6.5%.

Even allowing for analysts' well-known aversion to the word "sell," the proportion of "strong buys" is probably a good indication of a stock that they genuinely prefer.

By broad stock market sector, the energy sector has a much higher proportion of strong buy recommendations than any other, at approximately 28%.

This is not surprising given the price of crude. However, the industrials and technology sectors also both have a relatively high proportion of "strong buy" recommendations.

At the other end of the scale, non-cyclicals and telecoms currently have the lowest average "strong buy" recommendations. Explaining the strong buy recommendations

We wondered whether it would be possible to identify the characteristics of stocks with a high proportion of such recommendations relative to those with fewer.

To do this we estimated a cross-sectional regression. We find that two features are highly significant factors in the description of "strong buy" stocks: market capitalization; and dividend yield.

There is a strong correlation between large stocks with low dividend yields and "strong buy" recommendations."

There is also tentative evidence (significant at the 85% level) of a positive relationship between last year's EPS and today's "strong buy" recommendations.

By contrast, and not surprisingly, when we estimated the same regression using the proportion of "hold" recommendations as the independent variable, we found that smaller stocks with higher dividend yields tended to have a higher proportion of 'hold' recommendations. Conclusions

The U.S. economy's soft patch has gradually disappeared and corporate earnings have continued to surprise on the upside. This optimism about the outlook for the U.S. economy, and the corporate sector in particular, is currently reflected in analysts' recommendations for S&P500 stocks.

Assuming that we can characterize a low dividend yielding stock as being a "growth stock," then on average we can conclude that analysts currently favor large-cap growth stocks over smaller "value" stocks.

A DOW JONES NEWSWIRES COLUMN

Tuesday's quarter percentage point increase in the federal funds target rate is yet another reminder that hedge funds are struggling to make outsized returns this year as their beloved carry trade continues to get squeezed.

And with volatility low for most of the year, some hedge fund investors are looking beyond their traditional playgrounds to find areas that can generate returns.

For sure, after a less-than-stellar start to the year, hedge fund strategies are showing signs of improvement.

HFRI's fund-weighted composite index is up 4.10% for the first seven months of 2005 while the HFRI fund of funds composite index is up 2.26% during the same period. The indexes are published by HFR Group, a database and asset management company.

Both indexes generated good returns in July. For the last year and a half, though, hedge fund indexes have shown returns that were for the most part in line with traditional indexes, said Mike Hennessy, a managing director at Morgan Creek Capital Management, a Chapel Hill, N.C.-based firm which has about 75% of its $1.3 billion in assets invested in hedge funds.

Hedge funds, like other financial institutions, have seen one of their favorite plays, the carry trade - in essence a strategy of borrowing short-term funds at low rates and investing them in longer-term, higher-yielding securities - get squeezed by the Federal Reserve's steady hikes in short-term interest rates, while long-term rates remains low, shrinking the gap between them.

"(Federal Reserve Chairman) Alan Greenspan has already stated: you should get out of your carry trade. What we're doing is incompatible with your trade," Hennessy said, adding that "a lot of the carry trade has been done in a very unsophisticated way," with no hedging.

Hedge funds may also be threatened by the relative attractiveness of cash investments. Rich Bernstein, a strategist at Merrill Lynch noted in a conference call on Monday that as cash rates rise with higher federal funds rates, cash becomes an asset class that competes with hedge funds and other asset classes in a low return environment.

Low Volatility

Another problem for hedge funds has been low volatility in the financial markets. Hedge funds thrive off a number of things, one of which is market dislocations, said Aleksander Weiler, global investment strategist at Tremont Capital Management, a fund of funds and advisory firm based in Rye, N.Y. Markets that are more volatile tend to have more dislocations, he noted.

The CBOE Volatility Index, known as the VIX, is not far off its five-year low. The index is a measure of market expectations of near-term volatility conveyed by S&P500 stock index option prices.

Merrill Lynch's MOVE index, which measures normalized interest rate volatility, has been in the relatively low 75-85 range for most of 2005, below its five-year average.

"Volatility has been very low on a historical basis. Part of it has to do with the Fed being so transparent in their policy," noted Joe Shatz, senior government bond strategist at Merrill.

The Federal Reserve has consistently signaled that it would raise rates in 25 basis point increments since it began its tightening campaign in 2004.

Strategies

By far the worst hedge fund strategy in 2005 has been convertible arbitrage. Funds that employ this strategy typically make money by playing off the differences in the value of a convertible bond - a hybrid security that pays a coupon like a bond but can convert into stock on certain conditions - and its underlying stock volatility.

While these funds have recently staged something of a comeback, they were hit in the first half of the year with low volatility and widening corporate risk premiums on their securities.

One fixed-income strategy that has produced decent, but not spectacular returns so far is distressed debt investing. The HFRI distressed securities index has returned 3.73% this year through July, while in 2004 it returned a whopping 18.63% and 29.70% in 2003.

Some investors are looking to more esoteric strategies to generate returns. Sam Kirschner, a founding partner at Mayer & Hoffman Capital Advisors, is bullish on hedge funds that invest in collateralized debt obligation (CDO) securities. CDOs are popular investment vehicles that issue debt and equity and invest in a variety of corporate or consumer-related debt.

"We think it's a market that doesn't yet have (too much) capital," Kirschner said.

Another area he sees opportunity in is the Reg D investment space, where hedge funds lend money to public companies. Mayer & Hoffman has $120 million under management and specializes in investing in new hedge funds.

Overall, though, hedge funds are producing positive, if low, returns.

"No one's really making big money except some individual managers here and there. But hedge funds are doing what they're supposed to: preserving capital, except for convertible arbitrage," Morgan Creek's Hennessy noted.

Hedge funds thrive off a number of things, one of which is market dislocations, said Aleksander Weiler, global investment strategist at Tremont Capital Management, a fund of funds and advisory firm based in Rye, N.Y. Markets that are more volatile tend to have more dislocations, he noted.

The CBOE Volatility Index, known as the VIX, is not far off its five-year low. The index is a measure of market expectations of near-term volatility conveyed by S&P500 stock index option prices.

Merrill Lynch's MOVE index, which measures normalized interest rate volatility, has been in the relatively low 75-85 range for most of 2005, below its five-year average.

"Volatility has been very low on a historical basis. Part of it has to do with the Fed being so transparent in their policy," noted Joe Shatz, senior government bond strategist at Merrill.

The Federal Reserve has consistently signaled that it would raise rates in 25 basis point increments since it began its tightening campaign in 2004.

Strategies

By far the worst hedge fund strategy in 2005 has been convertible arbitrage. Funds that employ this strategy typically make money by playing off the differences in the value of a convertible bond - a hybrid security that pays a coupon like a bond but can convert into stock on certain conditions - and its underlying stock volatility.

While these funds have recently staged something of a comeback, they were hit in the first half of the year with low volatility and widening corporate risk premiums on their securities.

One fixed-income strategy that has produced decent, but not spectacular returns so far is distressed debt investing. The HFRI distressed securities index has returned 3.73% this year through July, while in 2004 it returned a whopping 18.63% and 29.70% in 2003.

Some investors are looking to more esoteric strategies to generate returns. Sam Kirschner, a founding partner at Mayer & Hoffman Capital Advisors, is bullish on hedge funds that invest in collateralized debt obligation (CDO) securities. CDOs are popular investment vehicles that issue debt and equity and invest in a variety of corporate or consumer-related debt.

"We think it's a market that doesn't yet have (too much) capital," Kirschner said.

Another area he sees opportunity in is the Reg D investment space, where hedge funds lend money to public companies. Mayer & Hoffman has $120 million under management and specializes in investing in new hedge funds.

Overall, though, hedge funds are producing positive, if low, returns.

"No one's really making big money except some individual managers here and there. But hedge funds are doing what they're supposed to: preserving capital, except for convertible arbitrage," Morgan Creek's Hennessy noted.

0239 GMT [Dow Jones] Topix's outperformance against S&P500 and FTSE100 likely to occur "within the next month," says JP Morgan equities derivatives strategist Michiro Naito. Likely catalyst for upswing will be mid-August release of OECD Composite Leading Indicators; strong correlation between good figures and rally on Topix; in past, Topix has outperformed both FTSE and S&P500 by margin of "around 10 to 15%," he says. Also notes historically Topix tends to outperform other developed markets by wide margin during bull markets, but to date gains on Topix have trailed other developed markets. Topix up 0.5% at 1210.82 midday. (JMI)

0548 GMT [Dow Jones]] Tokyo stocks may be overheating short term, says Deutsche Securities analyst Mamoru Shimode, noting 5-week advance-decline ratio now over 120%, S&P500-TOPIX ratio at 1.01 Friday, lowest since May 10. "Any notion that the Tokyo market was still lagging behind other major markets should have been dispelled by now, with new stock market highs having become extremely unlikely"; adds many big manufacturers may not benefit from weak yen in 2H as "prospects of a recovery in exports recedes further into the future." When firms release April-June results, risk of downward revisions to FY outlooks "far outweighs" possibility of hikes, he says.(JMI)

0133 GMT [Dow Jones] With Japanese firms increasingly hiking dividends, Nikkei dividend swaps are good bet, says J.P. Morgan Securities; over past decade, dividend-per-share for S&P doubled, FTSE100 steadily rose, whereas Topix dividends went back to where they were 10 years ago; "history suggests there is more upside in Japanese dividends." If Nikkei dividend yield (now around 1.05%) rises to FTSE100 level (3.7%), dividend-per-share would be 413 pts, if it gains to S&P500 level (2.04%), dividend-per-share would be 228 pts. "On this basis, we believe JPMorgan's 2-year Nikkei dividend swap offer of 133pts is attractive," brokerage says. (AXS)

MARKET TALK can be found using N/DJMT

10:24 (Dow Jones) The Dow Industrials is slugging it out at the technically important 10100.16 level, which is the dividing line between a move to 10361.33 resistance, or to 10000.00-area support. It's not a trivial matter because a Friday close below 10361.33 would begin a technical breakdown that could finish off the stock market uptrend on the long-term charts. (SWC)

10:12 (Dow Jones) Chicago PM index fell to 65.6 in April on a seasonally adjusted basis from 69.2 in March, according to a press release. The Chicago survey is watched closely for clues to the index of the Institute for Supply Management. The ISM April survey will be released Monday at 10:00 Eastern. (DDR)

10:02 (Dow Jones) All 100 of the industry groups tracked by Dow Jones were in positive territory in the early going. The best performing of those are coal producers, mining stocks, homebuilders, and chemicals companies - the same cyclical sectors that fared so poorly yesterday. The worst performing: specialty finance companies, insurance brokers, soft drink makers, and mobile telecom stocks. (MXH)

9:58 (Dow Jones) Comex June gold has surged, up $4.50 to $436.90. "It's short covering," says Leonard Kaplan, president of Prospector Asset Management. "I don't think it lasts, because we are not seeing a corresponding movement in the currencies or anything else. Silver has done nothing. It looks like isolated short covering." He suggests funds that had been short may be looking to book profits on the month's last trading day. (ALS)

9:45 (Dow Jones) Microsoft (MSFT) fiscal 2006 guidance is more upbeat than expected, showing the company expects to grow ahead of the release of Longhorn, which won't be until fiscal 2007. "While some believe Longhorn is necessary to drive growth, we believe the product cycles in the company's other business segments are being overlooked," says Friedman, Billings, Ramsey. "Management's guidance...supports this thesis." Ups fiscal '06 EPS estimate to $1.44 from $1.40. (CHR)

9:32 (Dow Jones) "We like what is out of favor and unloved. We are bullish on the out of favor asset class: US equities," Bill Miller says in his latest quarterly comments. The Legg Mason fund manager admits again his investment results have been penalized by lack of exposure to oil & gas, (as well as basic materials, utilities and real estate), but he remains unconvinced by commodity bulls who say this time it's different. "Five thousand years of commodity price experience says otherwise, as does 150 years of oil price experience," he says. (JHS)

9:18 (Dow Jones) After yesterday's weakness, it looks like the stock market will start the session on the upside, aided by a positive Microsoft (MSFT) outlook and the 1Q Employment Cost Index. But if stocks turn tail, they would end up telling quite a tale. If the DJIA falls 30 points or more on Friday, it would make this the worst April performance for the industrial average in 35 years. (KJT)

9:06 (Dow Jones) Lehman analyst Jay Gelb says the latest AIG reports might be less positive than he expected - with the 10-K apparently being delayed again and the charge expected to be higher - but he expects shares to rally slightly as the news could remove an overhang about the size of the charge. Noting that the total charge should be no more than $3B, according to the press reports, Gelb says: "We view this development as favorable for AIG shares because the charge should be limited to less than 4% of book value and about 1 quarter's earnings." Lehman stays overweight AIG. (NPB)

8:54 (Dow Jones) Morgan Stanley sees an opportunity to pick up some Whole Foods (WFMI) shares, upgrading to overweight from equalweight and raising its target to $112 from $86. The broker believes sustainability of the expansion story should continue to support premium valuation and the recent pullback offers the chance to build positions. Morgan Stanley forecasts 20% long-term EPS growth, which it sees as the primary driver of the stock. WFMI up 2.1% premarket at $100.22. (NPB)

8:38 (Dow Jones) Personal income rose by 0.5% in March and personal consumption expenditures rose by 0.6% boosted by an increase in auto sales. The rise in consumption was a bit more than expected and Feb was revised up to show a 0.4% gain instead of 0.3%, suggesting there was a bit more consumer momentum as the quarter ended. The PCE core price index rose by 0.3% and was up 1.7% on a year over year basis. (JJM)

8:23 (Dow Jones) Microsoft's (MSFT) 3Q revenue - hurt by forex - is a mild disappointment, CIBC World Markets says, but the broker comes away more pleased by MSFT's ability to deliver in-line EPS, 95M share repurchase, strong deferred revenue, and upbeat '06 guidance. Deferred revenue declined only $25M sequentially, less than the expected $200M-$300M fall, and management guided '05 deferred balance outlook from $8.6B to $8.8B, signaling to CIBC that underlying health of operations remains strong. While MSFT's growth profile has slowed, CIBC says market dominance, strong cash generation, and ongoing EPS growth should push the stock higher in coming quarters. It has a $31 target. (NPB)

8:05 (Dow Jones) Legg Mason upgrades Sirius (SIRI) to buy for the first time and has a $7 target. "With the stock off significantly to the pre-Mel Karmazin level and the company's operations firing on all cylinders, we believe there is now significant upside potential." Legg was particularly impressed by churn in the latest quarter, and sees several potential catalysts this year: $50 rebate promotion in 2Q05; Ford factory installs in 3Q05; and Howard Stern pulling subs into 4Q05 (not to mention new devices based on the new 3G chip). "We believe the company will beat its new 2005 ending subscriber guidance of 2.7M (our new forecast is 2.9M) and think the 2006 consensus of 5M (pre-1Q05 results) is way too low (we are at 6.7M)." SIRI closed at $4.86. (NPB)

7:45 (Dow Jones) Barring minor miracles, the S&P500 will end April below the previous year's close, notes Nomura strategist Anais Faraj. "A significant (more than 1%) loss at this stage of the year has not occurred since the 2001-02 bear market. Indeed, on no occasion during the Greenspan tenure (1987 onwards) has a loss to April of more than 1% been recouped by the end of the year," he says. However, in less 'modern' times, history gives bulls more hope. "Between 1970 and 1986 there were eight occasions when the first four months produced a net loss," Faraj says. "Half the time the S&P500 saw an even bigger loss for the year as a whole. But in the other four years (1970, 1980, 1982 and 1984) - which all occurred during or just after a major bear market - equities recovered and ended in the black." (NPB)

Following the higher inflation numbers in yesterday's 1Q GDP report, the PCE deflator in this morning's personal income & spending data will be closely watched. Later in the morning, Michigan sentiment and Chicago PMI - both available early if you pay up - are expected to follow the weaker trend seen in some numbers recently. Both April readings are seen falling from March levels. S&P futures up 6.6 points; 10-year down 8/32 to yield 4.18%. (NPB)

4:06 (Dow Jones) For stocks, it was a reversal reminiscent of the bubble years. Investors chose to hear the dovish side of the Fed's discussion of future rate moves, paving the way for a triple-digit reversal on the Dow and an equally impressive upturn in techs. Such moves often prove ephemeral, however - particularly given that, in this case, the Street just as easily could have focused on the hawkish tone that was also found in the FOMC minutes. Sizable drop in oil prices also chipped in. Retail sales for March are expected to show a healthy rise, and Apple's 2Q numbers after the bell Wednesday may set the tone for back half of the week. DJIA rallies 59.41 to 10507.97, Nasdaq Comp improves by 13.28 to 2005.40, and the S&P 500 closed up 6.55 to 1187.76. (TG)

3:47 (Dow Jones) Lam Research (LRCX) is set to report fiscal 3Q results after tomorrow's close, and Susquehanna Financial thinks the company was able to meet its guidance for the period. However, "we anticipate a weaker outlook than most competitors due to the company's mix of customers," the firm says. Heavy exposure to Japan will hurt LRCX in its June quarter, as will "low relative exposure" to Intel (INTC). That will be balanced some by LRCX's exposure to Samsung. The firm stays at neutral on the stock, adding that weakness is "widely anticipated." (JHS)

3:41 (Dow Jones) Tamer-than-expected FOMC minutes spark bullish outside chart reversals for Jun S&P's and DJIA, as both contracts post lower lows followed by higher highs than Monday. Jun Nasdaq near its session peak, but struggles to overcome resistance at Monday's high of 1499.00. Last at 1496.50. Cash markets building on gains - DJIA up 80 at 10529, Nasdaq Comp ahead 15 to 2007, and the S&P 500 climbs 9 to 1190. (HLP)

3:28 (Dow Jones) Smith Barney cuts Brunswick (BC) to hold from buy and trims target to $51 from $54, saying shares already reflect most of its peak earnings expectations. The broker also sees risk to near-term EPS, with dealer checks indicating higher fuel prices are starting to impact demand and it expects materials costs to continue rising. Demand for smaller boats also appears soft, the broker says. Two seasonal factors to consider, too: BC tends to be weak May-Sept; and its shares typically top out at 13x two or three years ahead of a peak in profits. SB expects earnings to peak at $4.40 in '07. BC off 4.8% at $46.61. (NPB)

3:18 (Dow Jones) Wachovia says widening discounts and recent dividend cuts have created some buying opportunities in the closed-end fund universe. The firm has a list of funds that it believes offer attractive yields and valuations and "should perform well in the near future, in particular if there is a calm after the recent market storm." Wachovia favors EAD, BHD, FFC, HIO, WEA and BLW. Corporate loan funds that the firm thinks are attractive are FCT, PPR and VVR. (JHS)

3:07 (Dow Jones) So far, so good for the stock bulls. The Dow Industrials rallied nearly 150 points from a practically precise test of 10363.13 support and apparently avoided a near-breakdown earlier Tuesday. It ain't over until the average closes decisively above 10491.91. But confirmation is almost in the bag given the current intraday high at 10505.61.. (SWC)

2:57 (Dow Jones) Smith Barney tweaks its Home Depot (HD) 1Q and fiscal 2006 EPS forecast ever so slightly - by 1c - to account for word that John Deere's (DE) shipments of lawn-care products were down double-digits in March. "Coupled with the severe weather in most of the country, we believe this may have further depressed lawn care sales at HD," the broker says. But SB thinks a warmer April has unleashed pent-up demand for lawn care and other seasonal items. Thesis remains unchanged and the firm "strongly reiterates" its buy rating and $48 target. (JHS)

2:45 (Dow Jones) Desjardins Securities analysts expect aluminum price to average 85c/lb in 2005 and 2006, but say prices could spike as high as $1/lb (vs. about 89c/lb now). Strong demand growth in Brazil, Russia, India and China, plus growth in Western World demand, "should be sufficient to absorb the forecast level of incremental production." Inventories are low and should fall to "critical levels" by the end of 2006, while power and other costs are discouraging investment in new production, Desjardins says in a note. Merrill Lynch analyst Dan Roling also expects higher aluminum prices in the coming months. Alcoa (AA) shares flat; Alcan (AL) down 1.4%. (LMO)

2:30 (Dow Jones) Stocks come charging back following the FOMC minutes release. Perhaps those inflation fears weren't as ominous as some thought. The DJIA bounces off the low end of its recent trading range and erases a roughly 88-point decline, though trading still quite volatile. DJIA now up about 2; Nasdaq off 5; S&P 500 down a fraction. (JHS)

2:23 (Dow Jones) Pepsi Bottling (PBG) grew its high-margin cold drink volume by 1% in the 1Q despite tough comparisons from the year-ago period, a trend UBS analyst Caroline Levy considers evidence that it's "out-executing" the competition. She notes that Pepsi's product innovations and promotions appear to have "created strong momentum going into the summer," when it has a host of product launches and promotions planned. Levy ups her price target on the stock to $35 from $33.50 on the heels of the 1Q results. PBG shares up 8.7% to $29.40. (RKS)

2:06 (Dow Jones) Fed officials were worrying about inflation, but even so, "many participants stated that they expected total inflation to diminish and any rise in core consumer inflation to be limited." (MSD)

2:04 (Dow Jones) The meeting minutes seem to spell out a more aggressive stance for central bankers, and that the worries over inflation were more broad-based than understood at that time. Indeed, few Fed officials had worried about price pressures in speeches, a curious development given the meeting minutes. (MSD)

2:02 (Dow Jones) The FOMC meeting minutes for the March 22 meeting showed the view that a "measured pace" of hikes doesn't preclude more aggressive action, although the need for such action was not called for at this time. "Many" were more worried about inflation and "some" supported dropping the balance of risks language. (MSD)

1:59 (Dow Jones) Money managers are among the many losing ground. Earlier, Alliance Capital (AC) warned that 1Q would miss the Street's 68c EPU target. AC down 7.7%; Affiliated Managers (AMG) off 2.5% to $58.93; Janus Capital (JNS) drops 1.7%; and T. Rowe Price (TROW) declines 1.7%. (KJT)

1:43 (Dow Jones) Management shuffle at Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (BCM) is part of "ongoing transition" of the bank's executive team, not a sign of operational problems, says BMO Nesbitt Burns. New head of retail banking is well-known to the investment community, while the new head of wealth management comes in with "good credentials and recommendations." Overall impact is neutral, BMO says. New COO Gerry McCaughey widely seen as eventual successor to CEO John Hunkin. (MAG)

1:27 (Dow Jones) Deutsche Bank cuts Linens 'n Things (LIN) to hold from buy. The firm says "our store checks reveal out of stocks in the textile business. This was the issue that caused the 1Q05 pre-announcement, and while we hadn't expected it to be completely fixed this quickly, we have seen few signs of improvements." Deutsche still likes the long-term story for LIN, but the short-term is "rocky". Shares off 3.1% to $24.23. (JHS)

1:08 (Dow Jones) Of the 30 S&P500 companies that have already announced 1Q results, 85% have matched or exceeded estimates, with an average earnings increase of 25% vs last year's 1Q, says Zacks Investment Research. (KJT)

12:51 (Dow Jones) NY Fed boss Geithner's in Puerto Rico, and he's worrying again about government and trade deficits. It's a familiar theme for him, and he says the problems are manageable as long as they are addressed. He said the Fed can help by keeping policy credible and inflation low. (MSD)

12:23 (Dow Jones) Moves by both CP Ships (TEU) and several of its competitors to cut TransAtlantic capacity may set stage for rate increases later this year, says David Newman at National Bank. CMA-CGM-led consortium taking ships out of Montreal, Maersk Sealand (MAS.YY) moving out of Halifax, and CMA-CGM signing slot charter deal with TEU, all lower capacity on trade lane by between 4%-5%. TEU also trimming costs in trade lane, while surcharges and hedges limiting blow from rising fuel costs. 1Q still to be choppy, 2Q may see benefits, he says. Raises outlook, target and estimates. (MAG)

12:06 (Dow Jones) Yesterday's departure of QLT's (QLTI) CFO, Mike Doty, doesn't alarm Raymond James analyst Brian Bapty. He notes Doty was hired prior to CEO Paul Hastings and he believes the change "simply represents the natural evolution of senior management towards a team structured directly" by Hastings. He sees the recent drop in the pharmaceutical company's share price, plus any fallout from Doty's resignation, as a buying opportunity. On Nasdaq, QLTI is off 3.2% at $12.03. (AMG)

11:44 (Dow Jones) "We would be aggressive buyers" of Alliance Capital (AC) on today's weakness, Buckingham Research says. The 1Q profit warning is based on "temporary factors" and the core business is doing well, adds the firm. Higher legal costs should ease in 2Q, and "mark-to-market losses - in non-operating income - will serve, if sustained, to reduce compensation costs equally offsetting earnings pressures." (JHS)

MARKET TALK can be found using N/DJMT

9:48 (Dow Jones) Morgan Stanley maintains an overweight rating on Outback Steakhouse (OSI) and keeps a $53 target. "We see rising earnings power over the next few years for Outback's developing brands: Carrabba's, Bonefish, Fleming's and Cheeseburger in Paradise," the broker says. "As these newer brands prove their earnings power, we believe this will help ease investor concerns over the eventual maturing of the core Outback brand while reinvigorating the company's long-term growth story." OSI up 0.7% at $46.10. (NPB)

9:35 (Dow Jones) Comex June gold is more than $2.20 lower around $428.80 an ounce despite weaker-than-expected payrolls data. Dealers say the softer payrolls number is viewed as "less inflationary" on the economy and tarnishes gold's appeal as an inflation hedge. However, buyers are seen in place below the market to limit weakness. (GJM)

9:22 (Dow Jones) Shares of Progenics Pharmaceuticals (PGNX) decline 1.4% to $16.56 in premarket trading after the company priced a 2 million shares public offering at $15.25 a share. The proceeds, expected to be about $29.3M, will be used to fund clinical trials of its investigational drug methylnaltrexone and to fund clinical trials of other product candidates and for other research and development programs. (JLR)

9:11 (Dow Jones) Curis (CRIS) shares rise 3.4% to $3.70 and Genentech (DNA) shares are indicated higher in the premarket session after Genentech filed an Investigational New Drug application with the FDA to initiate human clinical investigation of a drug candidate for the topical treatment of basal cell carcinoma. The drug candidate was discovered by Curis and is being co-developed through a collaboration between Genentech and Curis. (JLR)

8:57 (Dow Jones) After a few minutes of holding tight to sift through the payrolls data, fed funds futures participants are factoring in about a 3.295% federal-funds rate by the June 29/30 Federal Open Market Committee meeting. The pricing compares to the about 3.32% funds rate for late June which was factored in just before the data release. (CMN)

8:46 (Dow Jones) Average hourly earnings are building some momentum. They rose 0.3% in Mar, which would be a 3.1% rate annualized. Earnings rose by 2.6% over the last 12 months while the CPI rose 3.0% over the year through Feb, so, earnings are still catching up to the rise in prices, but they're closer. (JJM)

8:36 (Dow Jones) Nonfarm payrolls were up by only 110,000 in Mar and were revised down to show a 243,000 gain in Feb (had been 262,000) and 124,000 in Jan (had been 132,000). The workweek was unchanged and hourly earnings rose by 0.3%. The jobless rate fell to 5.2% from 5.4% in Feb. All in all, it's a very muted jobs report suggesting that business is hiring very slowly, although the fact that there is hiring at all is a sign that the economy is still growing at a moderate pace. (JJM)

8:33 (Dow Jones) Not the sweetest hiring number: March employment only rose by 110K jobs, versus expectations of a 225K gain. This number is right around the area where the economy is simply absorbing new entrants to the labor force, and it will help cool expectations that the Fed may become more aggressive with rate hikes in future months. (MSD)

8:20 (Dow Jones) A quick reminder, as if you need one. The median estimate of 21 economists surveyed by DJN/CNBC is for a 225K increase in payroll jobs in Mar and an easing to a 5.3% unemployment rate from

5.4% in Feb. They look for a 0.2% increase in average hourly earnings. "Feb's surge in payrolls was almost certainly exaggerated by weather effects just as the drop in jobless claims between Jan and Feb was at least partly weather-related," says Jim O'Sullivan, senior economist at UBS Investment Research. "Claims remained low into early Mar, however, even as the weather turned more seasonal the implication is that the trend has picked up from last year's 183K per month average." (JAM)

8:16 (Dow Jones) JPMorgan downgrades Viisage Technology (VISG) to underweight from neutral, expecting the stock to continue underperforming in the next six months pending evidence of an operational turnaround. "The stock has traded down 62.6% year-to-date versus a 2.6% decline in the S&P500, so the downgrade comes late in the day, but we see risk to earnings and sales forecasts owing to a slower-than expected deployment of a coordinated government ID system and international biometrics-enabled passport programs." Not only does JPM think VISG's growth will be outpaced by its biometrics peers near-term, the broker also reckons it may have underestimated the costs associated with fixing VISG's internal control weaknesses and defending against a raft of shareholder lawsuits. (NPB)

8:02 (Dow Jones) CIBC World Markets starts coverage of Novelis (NVL) with a sector performer rating and $23.50 target. "Novelis is a distinctive entity in the equity markets, and is expected to undergo a period of price discovery," the broker says. "The Novelis business base is more stable than a commodity business, yet still subject to economic and currency fluctuations." Shares closed at $21.92. (NPB)

7:48 (Dow Jones) Trump Hotels & Casino Resorts (DJTCQ) Chairman and CEO Donald Trump didn't receive a bonus for 2004, according to the company's annual report. Trump received a $1.5M salary for 2004, the same salary he received in 2003 and 2002. He also received $447,853 in other compensation. (RJB)

7:30 (Dow Jones) Stock futures look like holding a firmer tone into the March payrolls report. The expectation is for 225,000 nonfarm jobs to have been added last month. Manufacturing ISM isn't used to being put in the shade by other data, but that's exactly what happens today. No huge move is expected from that index anyway, with economists going for 55 in March from 55.3 in Feb. Michigan sentiment and construction spending rounds out a very busy day of data. Auto makers report March sales this afternoon, while Best Buy unveils results that were delayed earlier in the week. S&P futures up 3.4 points; 10-year flat, yielding 4.48%. (NPB)

Dow Jones) Wendy's (WEN) no longer will serve up monthly sales figures, starting later this year. The company led off its annual investors' conference by announcing that monthly figures "creates volatility in our stock price and encourages short-term trading." The restaurant chains operator will transition to quarterly reports after the 2Q. (RLG) 9:12 (Dow Jones) Morgan Stanley's Bill Pecoriello is expecting Coca-Cola Enterprises (CCE) shares to move lower today. The stock had run up yesterday on the hopes that Coca-Cola's (KO) stronger-than-expected results might mean some upside for CCE. Earlier, the Coke bottler released 4Q EPS of 17c. According to Pecoriello, the results were slightly below Wall Street estimates after accounting for tax items and a lower-than-expected tax rate. '05 EPS guidance remains "low to mid-$1.30's" but is based on what Pecoriello says are difficult to achieve volume targets, given the robust pricing growth targets. (CCC) 9:02 (Dow Jones) The Justice Department will ask a federal appellate court to reconsider a ruling that has prevented the U.S. government from seeking $280B in profits in a racketeering case against the tobacco industry. Several tobacco industry analysts say the move is not surprising, and are predicting an uphill battle for the government. The news may cause some weakness in tobacco stocks, particularly Altria Group (MO). Altria investors are hoping for a resolution of the case, as it is an impediment to the company's plan to break up into possibly three parts. (CCC) 8:50 (Dow Jones) Wal-Mart (WMT) may be going upscale - or, at least, a little less downscale. Following a generally lackluster 2004, the world's largest retailer has a few things to work on this year, President and CEO Lee Scott says. A big one is the company's merchandise, which focused too much on low-priced goods. While the company's low-income customers continued to be strapped by high prices on gasoline and home heating, Wal-Mart has been neglecting the company's better-off customers, who are far more interested in the kinds of mid- and higher-priced goods that can be found at Target (TGT), says Bill Dreher of Deutsche Bank. The Wal-Mart CEO says he will concentrate on putting more of the better stuff in Wal-Mart stores. "We left a lot on the table," Scott says. (JMC) 8:38 (Dow Jones) Import prices rose by 0.9% in January with oil up 4.6% accounting for most of the increase. Non-oil prices were only up 0.2%, which is not exactly alarming. Export prices rose by 0.7% which may be an indication of where core PPI will go when it is reported Friday and suggests that there is some domestic inflation. (JJM) 8:36 (Dow Jones) Jobless claims fell by 2,000 to 302,000 in the week ended Feb 12. Claims were last this low in the week ended Oct 28, 2000. The four-week moving average edged down to 311,750 from 315,750 and is now indicating an improved labor market, the best since late 2000 when the labor market peaked. (JJM) 8:24 (Dow Jones) Economists look for a 12K rise in weekly jobless claims to a 315K rate in the week ending Feb 12, according to a DJ/CNBC survey. Assuming the forecast is correct and there are no revisions, the four-week moving average would fall to 314,750 from 315,500. (JM) 8:17 (Dow Jones) Investors should start placing their bets on Harrah's (HET). Merrill Lynch added the stock to its Focus 1 list, as a slew of factors could drive its share price higher over the next 6-18 months. Harrah's is growing its presence in the gaming markets and a same-store growth story is emerging from the company. Harrah's will also start to see contribution from its acquisition of Caesar's. Lastly, the firm cited a strong project pipeline and "wild card opportunities." In addition to its growth prospects, the company also pays out a 2% dividend yield. Merrill maintains a buy rating on Harrah's. (RC) 8:02 (Dow Jones) H-P's (HPQ) solid 1Q will likely assist near-term sentiment, CIBC World Markets says. The broker says seasonal weakness lies ahead, but management tone on the outlook was constructive. "Consistency of execution remains the key to long-term upside from current 25% discount to the S&P500 - patient investors should accumulate through 1H seasonal weakness, with potential new CEO appointment a likely near-term catalyst," CIBC says. It has a sector outperformer rating and $30 target. Shares closed at $21.06. (NPB) 7:56 (Dow Jones) Guidant's (GDT) top executive has agreed to decline severance and other benefits he is entitled to in connection with Johnson &

Johnson's (JNJ) planned acquisition of the company. According to an SEC filing, under GDT's change-in-control plan, if the employment of President and Chief Executive Ronald W. Dollens terminates under some merger-related circumstances, he could have received a cash payout worth three times the sum of his annual salary and bonus, plus accelerated vesting of equity awards, continued welfare benefits for three years, additional pension credit and other benefits. Dollens received about $1.1M in salary and bonus for 2003. In December, Johnson & Johnson agreed to buy Guidant for $23.9B in stock and cash. (SXO) 7:37 (Dow Jones) MCI (MCIP), which agreed this week to an acquisition offer from Verizon (VZ), says it approved incentive payments to two executives for their work in the company's turnaround. In an SEC filing, MCIP says its board approved $300,000 payments to Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer Robert T. Blakely and Executive Vice President and General Counsel Anastasia D. Kelly. MCIP says the payments are intended to recognize the executives' "extraordinary accomplishments" in 2004 connected to financial restatements for 2002 and 2003 and MCI's emergence from bankruptcy protection. MCIP emerged from Chapter 11 bankruptcy last year after a massive accounting fraud. The company also restated its financial statements for several years, wiping billions in pretax earnings off its books. VZ is slated to acquire MCIP for $6.75B in shares, cash and dividend payments. 1329 GMT [Dow Jones] LONDON--CSFB continues to look for a retracement in the S&P500 during the latter part of the week in line with historical trading patterns going into Presidents' Day weekend. Expects OPEC to continue to drive oil prices higher based on production cuts, with a negative impact on equity markets. The S&P 500 has traded inversely to the price of oil over the last year. "The direction of price, not the level, has effected trading," says CSFB. (JUC)

0913 GMT [Dow Jones] LONDON--CSFB estimates that index funds will need to trade around $40B in the first stage of the S&P indices transition to free-float on Mar 18. "This represents 2-sided turnover ranging between 3.1% (S&P500), 4.9% (MidCap) and 5.1% (Small Cap)," says CSFB. The second stage will take place on Sep 16. The bank notes that while selling will affect less than 1-in-3 stocks, some stocks will be heavily down-weighted by float adjustments. CSFB highlights Wal-Mart Stores (WMT), Campbell Soup (CPB), Coca-Cola Enterprises (CCE), Loews (LTR), Pepsi Bottling Group (PBG), Ecolab (ECL) and Autonation (AN) as S&P 500 stocks with high expected index selling. MidCap's include Washington Post (WPO), Rollins (ROL), Hormel Foods (HRL) and Harte-Hanks (HHS). Small Cap's include Burlington Coat Factory (BCF), Vital Signs (VITL) and Standard Motors Products (SMP). (JUC)

(c) 2005 Dow Jones & Company, Inc.

0819 GMT [Dow Jones] LONDON--CSFB suggests selling the relatively expensive puts on the S&P 500 to fund the purchase of the relatively cheap puts on Semiconductor HOLDRS Trust (SMH), constructed at zero cost. "We believe that investors should take advantage of SMH's relatively low implied volatility level and propensity to underperform the market (S&P500) after breaching the Trading Envelope resistance level," says CSFB. The advantage of implementing a zero-cost long/short put option strategy is that the trade is most likely to pay off in a declining equity market environment, says CSFB. "That is, the SMH, which has a beta of roughly 2.00 versus the S&P500, is likely to underperform if the overall market falls. Second, if there is a strong market rally from now to the expiration date, both put option trades will likely end up out of the money and the investor will have no exposure or loss," says CSFB. 0000 GMT (Dow Jones) LONDON--US Globex futures are indicating a 1bp increase in the S&P 500 ahead of the 1330 GMT non-farm payroll report, says CSFB. The 10-year treasury is trading at 4.15% yield, down 1bp. "The consensus for the economists we follow is 185K," says CSFB. CSFB forecasts a negative market reaction if payrolls are below 180K.
